

STUDENT CODE OF CONDUCT

The Camden Clark Memorial Hospital Diagnostic Medical Sonography Program is committed to the educational and personal growth of its students. Behavior that infringes upon rights, safety or privileges, or that impedes the educational process is unacceptable.

Students should exhibit a strong intellectual curiosity. They must be willing to dedicate untold hours to studying the profession of diagnostic ultrasound. They must be capable of making accurate independent judgments regarding patients, organization of time, and eventually functioning independently. They should be interested in developing good psychomotor skills, in working with their hands, equipment manipulation, and constantly learning new skills. Physical and mental health should be maintained. Students should strive to master handling stressful situations regarding patients, as well as fellow health care professionals, in a fast-paced working environment.

Effective communication, including listening, working effectively with various medical personnel, working as part of a team, are skills that must be developed and maintained. Good phone etiquette is always expected. Students, finding satisfaction in their studies and in helping patients, will develop a sense of pride and identity in the field of sonography and in Camden Clark Memorial Hospital. This should extend to how they represent themselves and the hospital in our community.
